Fraudulent Activity Notice

July 11, 2019 – As reported earlier this week in the news, a local crime ring has uncovered a new way to access funds affecting the Tucson and Oro Valley communities. In an effort to protect our community from further vulnerability, Pima Federal would like to address the nature of this fraudulent activity.

It is suspected that these criminals may have obtained consumer information from one of the recent data breaches that had the potential to affect consumers nationwide, such as the Equifax breach. It is important to note that there is no evidence of a security breach at Pima Federal nor was our database compromised in any way.

This was an isolated incident for our credit union, however there have been reports of other financial institutions being affected. In our case, employees of the credit union were able to detect the suspected fraud early, thwarting any further efforts by this group. Immediately after the fraud was discovered, Pima Federal notified the affected member and quickly reconciled their account to prevent our member from experiencing a financial loss.

As always, please review your account activity on a regular basis, including revolving credit accounts such as home equity lines of credit, credit cards, and personal lines of credit, in order to detect potential misuse early.

If you ever suspect any potential fraud, please contact us immediately.

Pima Federal's top priority is our member's safety and security.
